2. James Gouge^{9,10,11,12,13,14}, born April 25, 1777 in Essex County, Virginia; died November 15, 1860 in Grant County, Kentucky¹⁵. He married 3. Ellen Jane (Nelly) Juett January 22, 1807 in Harrison County, Kentucky^{16,17}.

3. Ellen Jane (Nelly) Juett^{18,19,20,21}, born March 06, 1789 in Harrison County, Kentucky; died December 20, 1850 in Grant County, Kentucky. She was the daughter of 6. William Juett and 7. Anna Falkoner.

Notes for James Gouge:

Gouge Family

James Gouge, born April 25, 1777 in Essex County, Virginia came to Bourbon County as a child along with a brother and their mother, a widow. James and his brother are believed to be grandsons of James Gouge, Gentleman, who migrated to Boston, Massachusetts in 1712 arriving aboard the ship, Sarah, from London.

James may have settled on the dry ridge trace as early as 1798 in then Pendleton County, now Grant County, constructing a cabin at a site identified today as the old Mason High School. On January 22, 1807 he married Ellen Jane/Nelly Juett in Harrison County. She was born March 6, 1789, a daughter of William and Anna (Falkoner) Jewett/Juett.

James and Nelly farmed extensively and operated a tavern in their home.

A U. S. post office named "Gouge" was established there in 1858. It operated as such until 1878 when the name was changed to "Mason," following construction of the Southern Railroad through the area.

Nelly died December 20, 1849. She and James are buried in the James Gouge Cemetery at Mason, where James' tombstone lists his death date as November 15, 1858. This is obviously an error as James, age 83, is listed in the 1860 Grant County Census as residing with his son, Lafayette P. Gouge. James' will, written in 1853, was probated January 10, 1861, following a court summons on November 28, 1860 to produce the will. This tends to confirm the month and day, November 15, as being the date of death, but in 1860 rather than 1858.

H. M. Kendall

Posted by bwf <franks104@aol.com> on Sun, 17 Oct 1999

No family has been more prominent in the history of Grant County than the Kendall family, and H. M. Kendall, the subject of this sketch, is the most prominent male member of that family now living, and the only one living in Grant County. He is a son of Alfred Kendall and Marietta Gouge Kendall. His mother was a sister to Uncle Jeff Gouge, and his father was a son of Louis Kendall, an old pioneer and large landowner of Grant County in a very early day. Hade was born in Grant County at the old Kendall homestead, just north of Williamstown, in 1853. His father was a very prominent citizen, and at his death one of the richest in the county. He owned 3,000 acres land just north and east of Williamstown, had many slaves in the old slave days, had money to loan and all kinds of personal property, and entertained at the old home place in regal style. When he died at the age of sixty-five he left an estate worth fully $135,000, to be divided among his six children. The old gentleman began life as a stage driver, married, and bought a far, and by industry and economy paid for it and then bought more, until his landed estate was a royal domain. Three times he served his people in the Legislature of Kentucky as their representative, with credit to himself and his constituents. He was a Democrat, and every member of the Kendall family from that day until this have been Democrats. Alfred Kendall raised six children, only four of whom are now living. Mrs. Eliza Hawkens is the oldest, and lives with her husband in Bourbon County; Louis N. is farming in the same county; James G. died some years ago; Mrs. Pheobe Collins wife of R. A. Collins; Alf. W. now dead and Hade M., who is the youngest and the only boy now living in the county. Hade was educated at the common schools, but all of the other children attended college. He has never married, and now lives on his fine farm of 181 acres, on the waters of Grassy Creek, in peace and quiet, with the good will and best wishes of all who know him.

Notice of a Public Sale 1836

Sale for settlement of the estate of Anna and William Juett to "be held at the William Juett farm located on the Lexington to Cynthiana to Cincinnati road just after passing through the small village of Renaker and just before crossing the middle fork of Raven Creek. This farm is the former William Kenedy estate, owned before by Simon Kenton.

Note: You will find many of these tools to be best in quality having been brought to Kentucky by William Juett made by his father in Virginia, also if you need to leave some of your family at home to come to sale do not worry about the small band of indians who have wintered up Raven Creek a ways as we have all helped them this winter and they are peaceful.
